Everyday Citizenship:

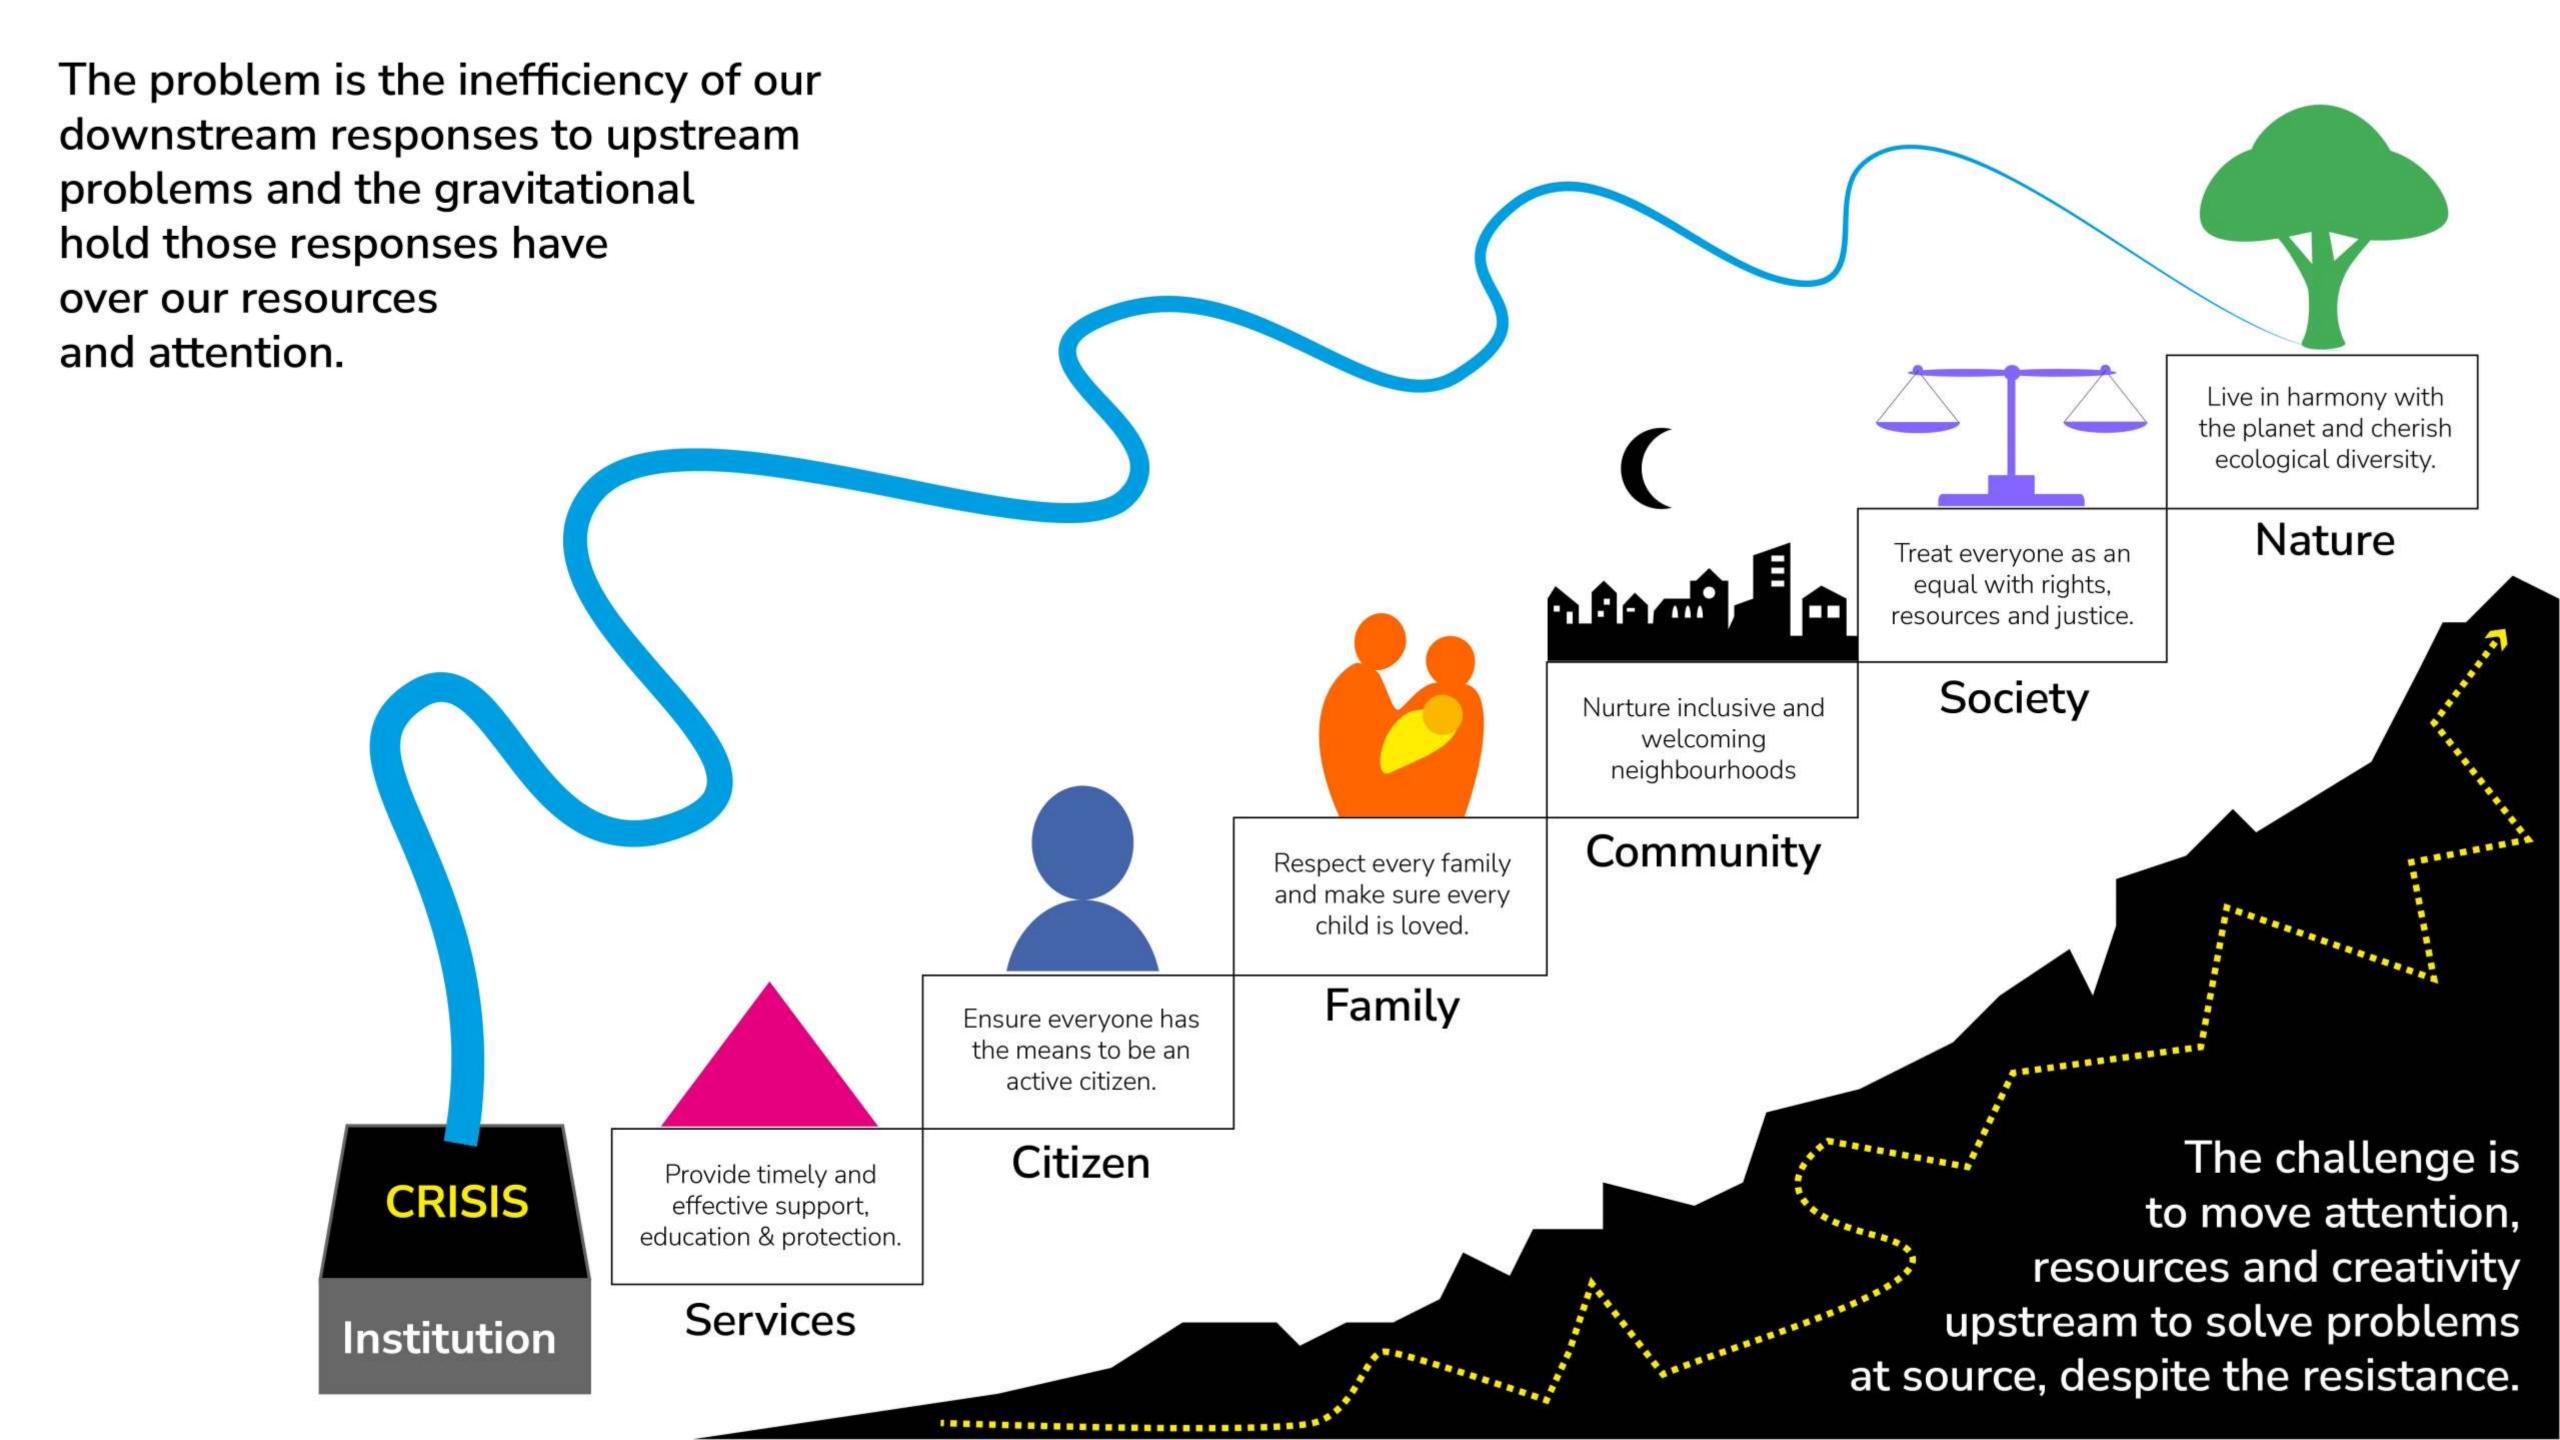

Seven keys to a life well lived

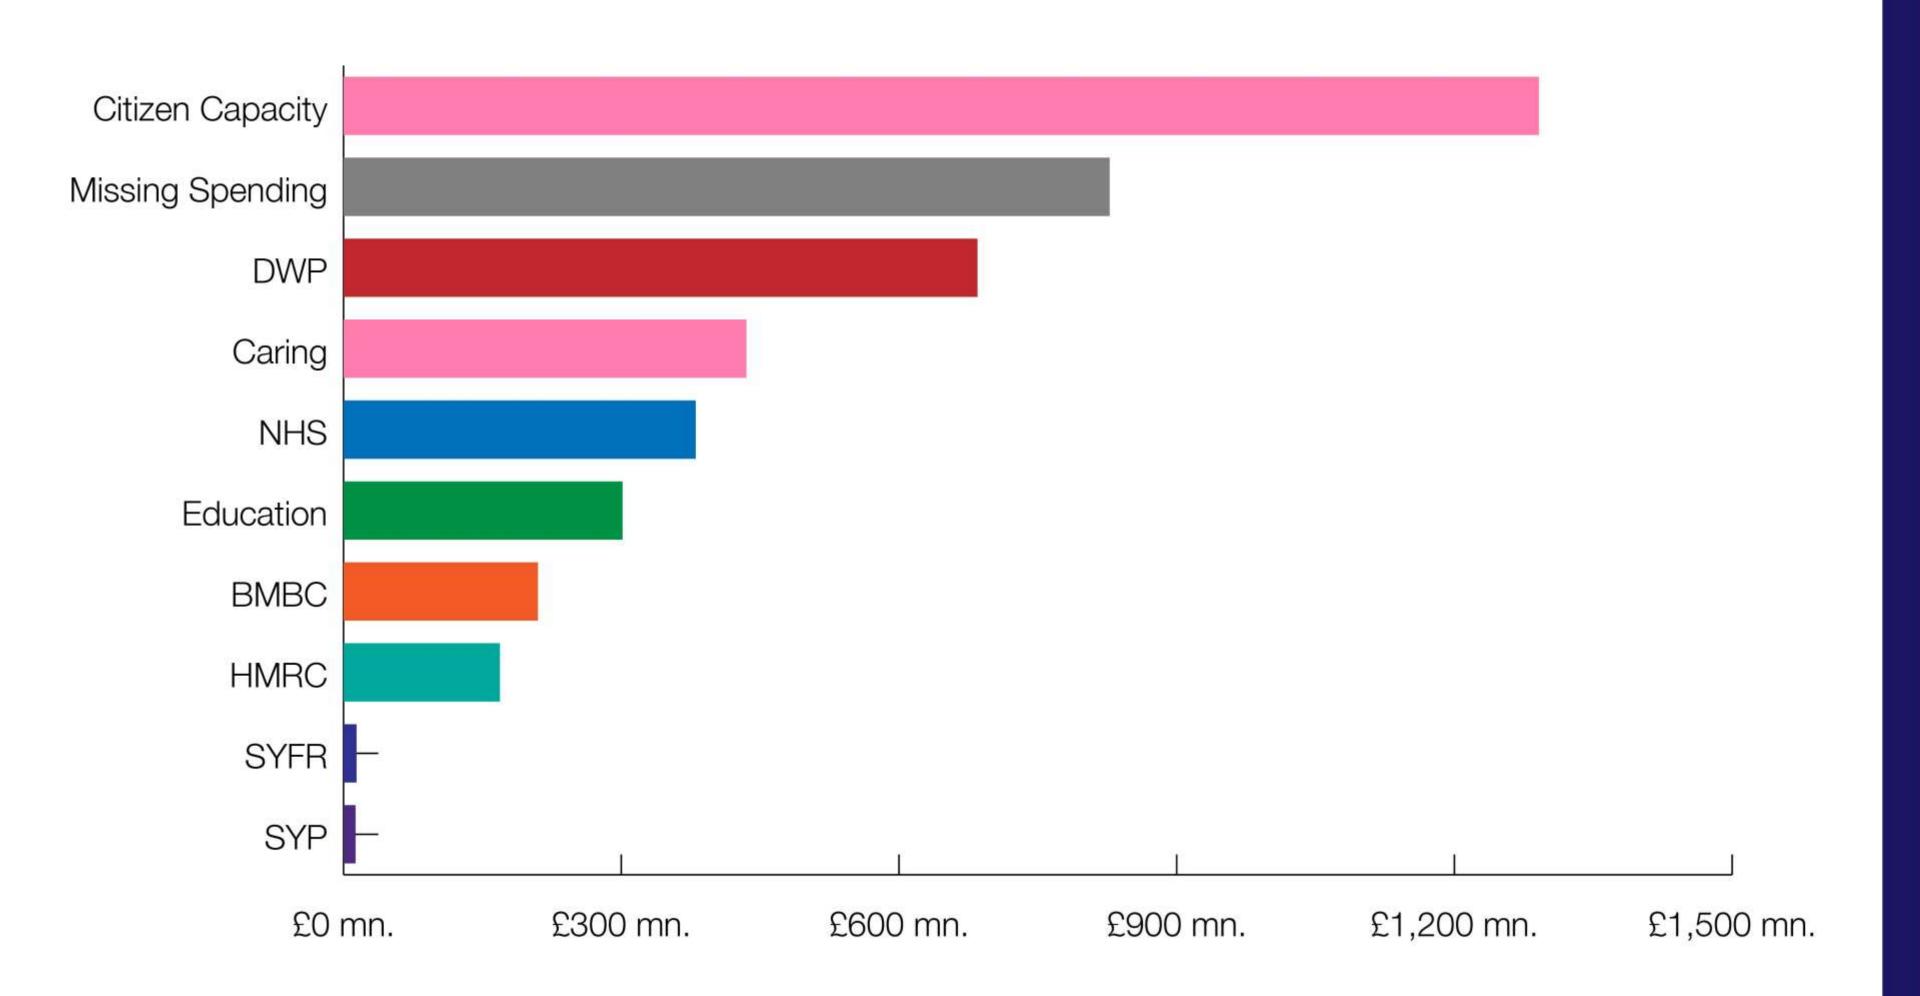

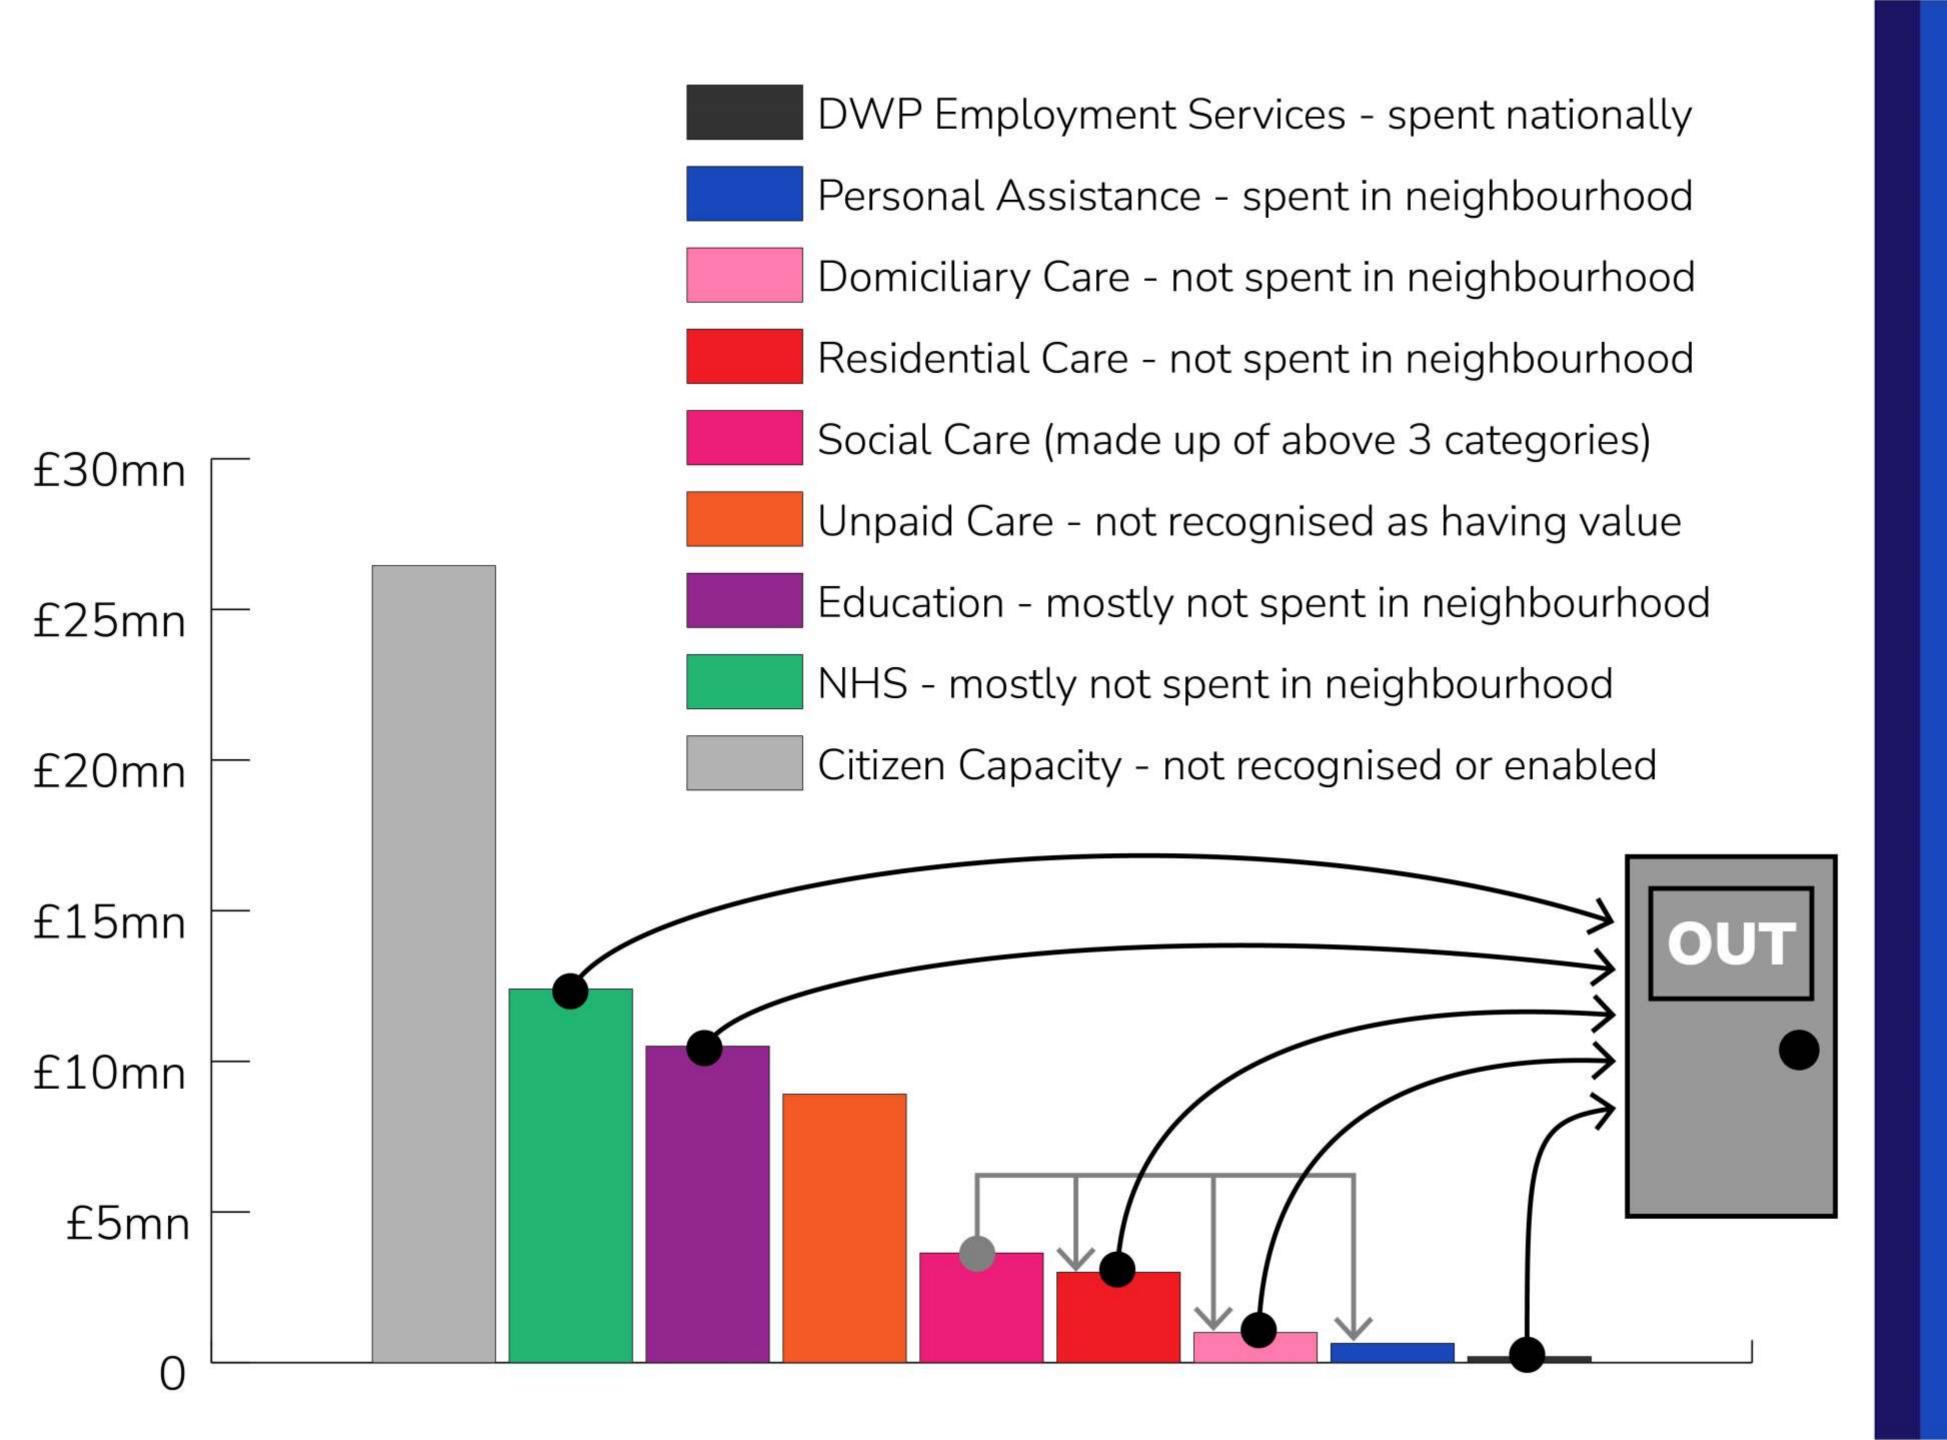

Citizen capacity & public spending

Places like Barnsley do not seem to recieve a fair share of public spending (only 68%) and local government controls only a fraction of actual spending (only 11%).

Citizens are also not recognised for their contribution, (e.g. unpaid care is worth over £0.4 billion). The potential for increased citizen capacity is £1.3 billion.

This data is taken from multiple sources and is not exact. However the general pattern is important. (Potential) citizen action and unpaid care are very large at a neighbourhood level but they have no 'exchange value'. Public services are largely economically absent at the neighbourhood level and hence generally extractive.

The social value of peer support

In 2019 the social value created by People Focused Group Doncaster was more than £3.2 million. In 2019 statutory financial support was only 1.5% of the social value created by PFG Doncaster. This social value was primarily created by peer support and mutual aid.

What's really expensive

- Institutional services and residential care services that effectively set prices.
- Letting people to reach crisis point and services organised in a panic or conflict.
- Weakening family and neighbourhood connections.
- Failing to build in peer support and stripping out community options.
- Building phoney markets and moving support away from neighbourhoods.
- Offering no support ro families, children and young people from birth.
- Buying services from organisations you don't trust.

The crisis is upon us...

the time for action is now.
